There is a catch to Grandpa's will. Malina and her family have inherited his old villa, but they will only get the house if they move in together with Aunt Rosie and her uncool son Alexander. How is that supposed to work?! Papa and Aunt Rosie haven't been able to stand each other for decades. And other people are interested in the villa, too: Eddie, a shady character, suddenly shows up. Together, Maline and Alexander must find out who has set their sights on Grandpa's inheritance.

An off-the-wall family story about a crazy fight over an inheritance.

CONTENT

There is a big catch in Grandpa's will. Twelve-year old Malina, her parents, and her younger brother Joschi have inherited not only a substantial amount of money, but also an old house just outside the city. But they will only get the money if they move into the house themselves. And what's more, they have to live with Aunt Rosie and her son, Alexander. Aunt Rosie is Papa's sister, and the two siblings haven't been able to stand each other for decades.

Aunt Rosie also has to obey the same conditions if she wants to inherit the money left to her in the will.

From the very beginning, living together in the new house proves to be difficult to chaotic. Each one of them, the adults and the children, is so different!

And then Eddie shows up. He seems very nice, but soon claims that he is an illegitimate son of Grandpa's. He alleges that he has another, more recent will, that leaves all the money and the house to him.

Joining forces to fight a common enemy, the children start to work together. They discover some things they share in common, and each of them recognizes that the others aren't so dumb after all. Papa and Aunt Rosie also talk through their differences. Finally, they bring to light the reasons for their bitter fighting all those years ago.

In the end, when they all join forces, everyone manages to triumph over Eddie, who turned out not to be a nice guy at all.
