In this story for early readers, Alma and her family move to a new town and open a refreshingly different kind of café: a pony café, where people and animals are welcome and sure to find their favorite delicious treats!

ABOUT THE SERIES

Alma's family owns a café with a very unique feature: it's a café where people and animals are welcome, and the spunky pony Einstein is their mascot! Alma has a big heart and a lot of confidence, and there is no end to the fun and adventure at the Pony Café.

CONTENT

Alma and her family are new to town. Her father is a pastry chef and plans to open a café, but how can he make his stand out from all the other places in town? When a miniature pony shows up in the courtyard one day, the family has a brilliant idea: they will open a pony café, an inviting, welcoming place for people and animals, and the pony Einstein will be their mascot! Soon the café is bustling with activity. Alma doesn't quite trust this good fortune, however. She is afraid that the pony's owner will show up one day and take Einstein away from them.

THE AUTHOR

Judith Allert was born in 1982 and studied modern German literature in Bayreuth, where she also published her first children's books. In 2009 she completed her master's thesis on the topic of fantasy writing for children and teens, and she has been a freelance author ever since. Today the author lives on an old farm with her husband, dogs, cats, horses, hens, and wooly pigs.
