In this second Pony Café book for early readers, the Pony Café is very popular with both people and animals in spite of a few glitches, but when the stubborn pony Einstein decides he absolutely must go to school with Alma one day, a new level of chaos unfolds.

ABOUT THE SERIES

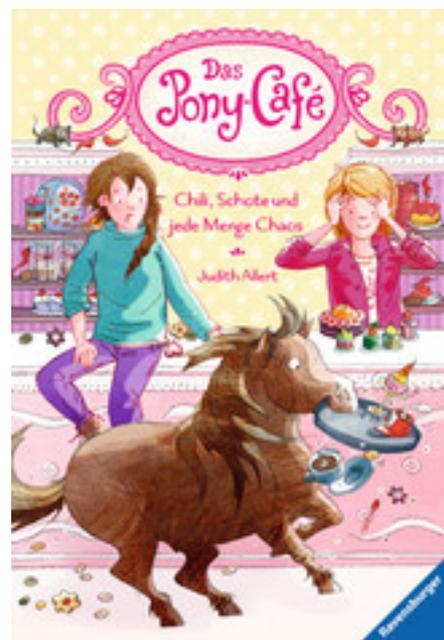

Alma's family owns a café with a very unique feature: it's a café where people and animals are welcome, and the spunky pony Einstein is their mascot! Alma has a big heart and a lot of confidence, and there is no end to the fun and adventure at the Pony Café.

CONTENT

The Pony Café is equally popular with people and animals, but it is not perfect. The mice Chili and Pepper just barely escape with their lives when cats come to visit, and when the pony Einstein helps wait on tables, quite a few dishes are broken. Einstein is just stubborn! When he decides he will accompany Alma to school, her classmates are delighted, but the caretaker is not amused, as Einstein brings his own special kind of chaos to the schoolyard.

THE AUTHOR

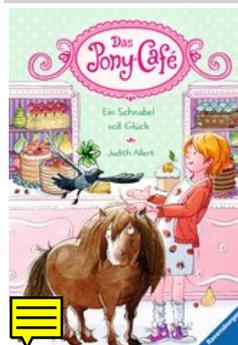

Judith Allert was born in 1982 and studied modern German literature in Bayreuth, where she also published her first children's books. In 2009 she completed her master's thesis on the topic of fantasy writing for children and teens, and she has been a freelance author ever since. Today the author lives on an old farm with her husband, dogs, cats, horses, hens, and wooly pigs.
