A new customer is creating chaos in the Pony Café: the frisky kid goat Lotte is keeping Alma on her toes. At the same time, her friend Elli is trying her hand at matchmaking.

ABOUT THE SERIES

Alma's family owns a café with a very unique feature: it's a café where people and animals are welcome, and the spunky pony Einstein is their mascot! Alma has a big heart and a lot of confidence, and there is no end to the fun and adventure at the Pony Café.

CONTENT

The tiny, fluffy, and frisky young goat Lotte is creating chaos at the Pony Café. It is all Alma can do to feed her milk and make sure she doesn't get into too much trouble. But Lotte is not the only thing keeping Alma busy. Her friend Elli has hatched a plan to bring her parents back together again, even though her dad is already head over heels in love with someone else. Elli, of course, won't let that get in her way. She already has an idea how she can drive the new woman away and make her dad appealing to her mom again. And who is being ignored while all of this is happening? The poor pony Einstein.

THE AUTHOR

Judith Allert was born in 1982 and studied modern German literature in Bayreuth, where she also published her first children's books. In 2009 she completed her master's thesis on the topic of fantasy writing for children and teens, and she has been a freelance author ever since. Today the author lives on an old farm with her husband, dogs, cats, horses, hens, and wooly pigs.
