A café that delights all the senses, with its very own dwarf pony as a mascot.

ABOUT THE SERIES

Alma's family owns a café with a very unique feature: it's a café where people and animals are welcome, and the spunky pony Einstein is their mascot! Alma has a big heart and a lot of confidence, and there is no end to the fun and adventure at the Pony Café.

CONTENT

Winter is an especially cozy time at the Pony Café: flickering candles, extra layers of icing on the cakes to look like snow, and the pony Einstein has even been decorated for Christmas occasionally. Alma and Elli are planning a holiday trip with their class to the farm on the outskirts of town, and Aunt Else, Einstein, and Jacob's mice Chili and Schote are all coming along.

At the farm, in addition to dusty, hidden corners and an enormous hay loft, there are of course lots of animals to discover. When the children hear noises in the hay loft and footsteps at night, they wonder if the farm is haunted or if the class clown is responsible. It turns out the farmer and his son disagree about the future of the farm and the animals. The children investigate and find out that the older farmer did a little haunting himself in order to scare his son. They have a discussion and come up with the idea of turning the old compound into an organic holiday farm with overnight adventure camping in the hay loft. The animals can stay!

But before that, the children enjoy the rest of their stay, with no arguments or ghosts – at most a few ghost stories around the fireplace.
